(c) the details of steps taken to amend the existing laws and make provision for stringent action, to curb these incidents?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT (SHRIMATI SUMITRA MAHAJAN): (a) and (b) As per the National Crimes Record Bureau, the incidence of crime in the country for the last three years relating to child rape, kidnapping and abduction, procuration of minor girls, selling/buying of girls for prostitution, abetment of suicide, exposure and abandonment, infanticide, foeticide and under Child Marriage Restraint Act shows a declining trend as indicated below:

1998	-	5882
1999	-	4957 (-15.9%)
2000	-	4949 (-0.2%)

Figures for 2000 are provisional.

(c) The Department of Women and Child Development, Government of India has initiated action to amend the Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956. The National Commission for Women was requested to conduct country-wide consultations to suggest amendments in the Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956 to make it more stringent and effective. The recommendations made by the Commission have been considered and consolidated by the Government after consultation with the States. The main thrust of the proposed amendments is to make the Act more stringent on traffickers and place greater criminal culpability on them.

The Law Commission of India has also made certain recommendations in its 172nd Report on the issue of child protection from sexual abuse, etc., categorised as:

—giving a broader definition for the word "Rape" to include various types of sexual assault.

—making punishments much more stringent especially for persons in positions of trust who indulge in child sexual abuse. This would effectively cover cases of non-commercial child abuse.
